

Creative solutions that weave all of your parts into a whole.

Just as the Internet was beginning to bud in 1996, and just as our church family shattered in unbelievable chaos, I turned to the AOL Chat rooms and sought out pastors who could explain to me the devastation in our church.

Every pastor I contacted disconnected the minute they heard our story. Puzzled by the consistency of the disconnect, I sought out answers and met pastor's wife after pastor's wife seeking help as well.

Seeing a vital need for pastor's wives and women in ministry to connect and share resources and experiences, I created the first online community for pastor's wives and women in ministry called Sarah's Tent.

In 2007 TIME magazine mentioned Sarah's Tent in an article about pastor's wives and quoted me as I described briefly the needs of a woman in ministry.

With this incredible bird's-eye view into the homelives and bedrooms of pastors and their families from every denomination I quickly saw many patterns of self-defeating behaviors, beliefs and the same stories of despair and chaos that had destroyed our own church. Same stories ... just different names and faces.

Pastor's families suffered financially as they devoted their lives to serving others, while denying themselves.

Thus began my journey to find answers and resources to facilitate life and the Call of God manifesting in the dreams and hearts of all of us.

I discovered that the reason pastors were disconnecting was because they had no answers and my questions tapped into pain that they preferred to deal with privately.

Sexual Addictions and Food Addictions were common as was a puzzling set of health issues that consistently manifested among these faithful men and women - and resources for these vulnerable and burned out ministers were unavailable in a secure and private setting.
